TELL ME A STORY.

The Children's Hospital

annual report 2006

Tell me a story.

ONCE THERE WAS A HOSPITAL...

The hospital was full of people who cared about kids and their families and their pets and all the special things kids love. It wasn't like any other hospital. This hospital was just for children.

Oh, yes, there were grown-ups, too. But these were special grown-ups. These grown-ups knew just how to help children feel good about themselves — from little teeny babies who cry sometimes to big kids who play sports and do big-kid stuff. Whether it was a tummy ache that wouldn't go away, or helping boys and girls learn why bruises wouldn't disappear, the grown-ups in this hospital were there to help make things better.

After nearly 100 years, this hospital is still here . . . it's called

THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL.

At The Children's Hospital you might find a nurse with bubbles in her pocket or an admissions assistant with beanie babies on her desk. You'll always find noodles in the cafeteria and, of course, brightly colored band-aids abound.

And it's not just kids who like The Children's Hospital. Parents like it, too! Parents choose The Children's Hospital because the doctors and caregivers who work at Children's are specially trained to help kids. Even the magazines that grown-ups read think The Children's Hospital is "tops." Children's was ranked in the top 10 by U.S News and World Report and by Child Magazine.

Whether it's researching new ways to help premature babies live with nitric oxide therapy, or pioneering a rib surgery, meeting a child for the first time to draw blood with kid-sized needles, or greeting a family who's coming back for multiple follow-up treatments, the staff at The Children's Hospital works with kids and for kids. With a commitment to family-centered care, they understand that the care team consists of the child's family, as well as a wide range of experts, and a child's pediatrician or family physician.

Inside the hospital, we work on kids' behalf through our clinical care and research, and outside the hospital on such issues as child abuse prevention, access to care and immunizations. As a teaching hospital, we're training the next generation of doctors and other healthcare providers.

We know being at the hospital is not always the place a family wants to be. But, we want to make certain that the experience a family has at our hospital is the best it can be. And we realize that every touch point is important, beginning from the moment a family calls in to make an appointment, through every interaction with our valet, volunteers, physicians, nurses, pharmacists, social workers, cafeteria staff, cleaning staff and the countless professionals who work at Children's. Our staff is here to do what's best for kids.

Whether you visit The Children's Hospital, know someone who has had an experience at Children's or who works here, you know that everyone has a story to tell. Read on for a few of the stories that demonstrate how Children's cares for kids and their families, professional colleagues and one another.

FROM THE MOMENT Cezar Marcelo Barragán came to The Children's Hospital, it was "all" who were taking care of him. From the Flight for Life staff who brought the just-over-a-pound boy to Children's by newborn transport from Denver Health, to the nurses on the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) who cared for him on a daily basis for more than 10 months, there was a team who always had his best interests in mind.

Many professionals came into the NICU to treat Cezar, including respiratory therapist Ernie Montoya and pulmonologist Vivek Balasubramaniam, MD, because of Cezar's need for support for his very small lungs and Arlene Drack, MD, who performed weekly eye examinations to determine if he was at risk of becoming blind because of his premature birth.

Working together, every member of his healthcare team was focused on what was best for Cezar and his family. On a regular basis, NICU nurses interacted with occupational therapists, speech therapists and physical therapists. Case worker Bev Klepacki helped prepare the way for Cezar's eventual trip home and worked with outside home care agencies to provide nursing assistance, as well as an agency to provide home OT/PT care.

"That's why babies come here. We have specialists for everything," said Debbie Ferguson, RN, Cezar's primary nurse and 30-year Children's staff member. "This is an exceptional family, and Miguela's dedication to Cezar is unbelievable."

This sentiment is echoed by Cezar's night nurse Michaele Pearl, who has cared for him regularly since he came to Children's, and Mi Jung Kim, his other primary nurse.

As the NICU nurses prepared Cezar to move to another floor, the feeling was bittersweet. It was extremely good news that he was healthy enough to move out of the NICU, but all the nurses had developed a deep attachment to him and his family. Many of his NICU nurses came in, even though they weren't working, especially to participate in the care conference about his transition.

As a worried Miguela expressed concern during the care conference, one of Children's medical interpreters translated: "The nurses in the NICU know him and he knows them," Miguela said. "I'm worried that he won't know the new nurses."

"Yes, the nurses up there will have to get to know him, but if he comes back to the hospital, he'll go to another floor, not the NICU. He's not a little baby anymore," said Claudia Mustafa, Children's clinical social worker. "We communicate with one another. The NICU nurses give very intense directions on how to care for their babies — they share his moods, how he acts, how to calm him. We want to see Cezar grow."

Coordinated care at Children's means the entire staff works together with the family and physicians. Whether a child transitions to a different floor, receives new treatment or prepares to go home, everyone on the team gets complete and comprehensive information, and is supported by their colleagues in caring for a child.

"It takes a lot of training and resources," Jodi Thrasher, Certified Family Nurse Practitioner (C-FNP), RN, says about taking care of the small children entrusted to our care. "We're all working together for the patient and family."

To provide the best care to the children we see, it's essential we give the same care and service to one another that we give to the children and families we see — respect and always an ear to listen to concerns and ideas. Working together, we truly are making it all better at The Children's Hospital.

ALL BEGAN with a small red rash. For months, Faith Bealer had a mosquito-bite-looking spot on her face. Only, it didn't go away with powerful creams prescribed by a dermatologist. The spot grew bigger, and Faith was tired all the time.

A rheumatologist finally diagnosed the condition as lupus, but then asked her mother, Cathy Bealer, "How long has she had this heart murmur?"

That simple question led to a chest x-ray and ultimately several tests by a pediatric cardiologist in the Bealer's home town of Billings, Mont. The diagnosis was mitral valve prolapse. Faith had a big hole in her heart causing the blood to back up and the valves would not close all the way. Her heart was enlarged because it was working so hard. The cardiologist recommended immediate surgery.

After much research and prayer, the Bealers decided on The Children's Hospital in Colorado. Cathy's research indicated Children's had a strong reputation, as well as the expertise of Francois LaCour Gayet, MD, world-renowned cardiothoracic surgeon.

"The minute we made that decision and contacted The Children's Hospital, it was the best experience of my entire life," explained Cathy. For eight days, the family stayed at The Children's Hospital and from insurance pre-authorization to transportation and accommodation needs, Peg Ayan, Welcome Coordinator for The Heart Institute, provided invaluable help.

"With Peg's help, half the burden was gone. I could concentrate on my daughter and talk to friends and family about Faith's condition. She took a huge load off," said Cathy. "From the minute we arrived, Peg led us through the hospital. She kept us company and was a positive face for us. She was our first impression and will always stay in my mind."

"I tell my families that I'm their 'non-clinical' contact while they're here at Children's," explained Peg. "I'm here to take care of the parents while they take care of their child. I tell them if there is 'anything' I can do to make this easier and less stressful, please, let me know! I can help them with directions, hotel arrangements, air travel, picking them up at the airport and just being there for them. I stop by daily and visit with them while their child is here to make sure that all is well."

"I cannot extol enough the virtues of such an important person in your facility, and I would highly recommend your hospital to anyone, without exception," said Cathy.

"The nurses treated Faith as a person," she continued. "One nurse on the post-op floor, Ben, was always upbeat. He was always calm and would tell us what was going to happen that day. It wasn't like he was doing a job. He cared for us."

"We got a lot out of this experience," Cathy added. "It resolved my faith in humans. It's incredible how one kind action can influence so many people."

Faith made a remarkable recovery and today she is doing well reading, working on art projects and baking cookies.

"I would refer anyone to The Children's Hospital in heartbeat," said Cathy.

“THE CARE AND CONCERN WITH WHICH WE WERE TREATED BY YOUR EMPLOYEES FAR EXCEEDED OUR EXPECTATIONS AND WE WILL BE FOREVER GRATEFUL.”

— CATHY BEALER, mom to 12-year-old Faith Bealer who came to The Children's Hospital Heart Institute for a mitral valve prolapse.

Tell me a story.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Peyton Palermo hadn't been feeling very well when her mother brought her to Spyridon Papadopoulos, MD, complaining of headaches and vomiting. While doing a neurological exam, she was physically very wobbly. He recommended The Children's Hospital for a CT scan.

Later that day Dr. Papadopoulos had to call and tell Peyton's mother, "What we hoped wasn't a big problem, is a very big problem." Peyton had a brain tumor.

Within a half-hour of that call, Children's world-class experts were meeting with the Palermo family and committed to helping the family figure out the best course of treatment.

"We were going to the zoo after the doctor's appointment," Celeste Palermo, Peyton's mother, explained. "This caught us off guard and we had no time to prepare or research. We weren't ready, and yet, everyone at Children's took care of us."

"I was very impressed with how quickly Children's staff got down there and talked with the family," Dr. Papadopoulos said. "They were very responsive and committed to helping the family identify the right course of treatment."

"Everyone from Dr. Papadopoulos and Dr. Michael Handler and his team, to the nursing staff and Sige, the smiling housekeeper who cleaned Peyton's room, were thoughtful and concerned," recalled Celeste. "It always seemed to us as if Peyton had a special place in their hearts and they treated her (and us, the anxious parents!) with extra special care."

Today, Peyton enjoys playing tennis and creating works of art.

As a community physician working in a primary care practice, Dr. Papadopoulos sees a lot of kids for well checks, immunizations and the minor scrapes and bruises of childhood and adolescence. When he sees patients such as infants with feeding problems or toddlers with recurring ear infections, or those who he diagnoses with more complex problems, such as Peyton, he knows the pediatric experts at Children's are only a phone call away.

"The level of communication is phenomenal. Staff at Children's are easy to access by phone and I get advice on world-class care," said Dr. Papadopoulos.

"Even when it comes to more basic conditions, such as bronchialitis, there's a great level of nursing care," he continued. "Patients don't get that level of care or experience by nurses at other hospitals. Nurses at Children's help get moms through admissions and call me if they're worried about something. They help us stay on our toes and kids get what they need."

Currently, Dr. Papadopoulos' primary care practice is just a few blocks away from The Children's Hospital. With the move to the Fitzsimons Medical Campus, the main hospital will be a little farther away, but he points out that the new hospital will offer single rooms and "the family and kid focus will amaze people."

"Luckily, Children's is maintaining a presence downtown at St. Joe's with an Emergency Department and inpatient beds," he added. "The new Children's Hospital will offer an environment that's even better for healing — and the same great people will be there."

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE

A LETTER FROM THE CHAIR AND PRESIDENT/CEO OF THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL, CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL,

FOR NEARLY 100 years, truly amazing stories have been created at The Children's Hospital. Last year brought us closer to a new chapter in our history, the Oct. 1 move to our new home at the Fitzsimons Medical Campus. The state-of-the-art facility will warmly welcome those seeking the high quality services and family-centered care Children's provides kids and their families.

Throughout 2006, Children's remained committed to its long-standing tradition of excellence in pediatric healthcare. As a result, our dynamic team continued achieving many successes while also juggling the tremendous planning required for the move.

Child Magazine ranked the hospital overall in the top 10; our Orthopaedics program third; our Emergency Department fifth; The Children's Hospital Heart Institute fifth; Pulmonary Medicine sixth, and our Oncology program eighth. In addition, the annual U.S. News and World Report survey ranked Children's seventh in the nation.

In the area of research, Children's became one of the few U.S. pediatric institutions to perform Vertical Expandable Prosthetic Titanium Rib surgery used to treat children with Thoracic Insufficiency Syndrome.

Children's was the first in the world to enroll a pediatric patient with a rare type of leukemia in a new clinical drug trial using forodesine. Rehabilitation Medicine received a five-year Centers for Disease Control and Prevention grant to identify and follow all boys in Colorado with Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

In August, Drs. John Kinsella and Steve Abman published their anticipated nitric oxide study in the New England Journal of Medicine and Lancet. Supported by a seven-year, $8.5 million multi-center grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, the study found that the use of inhaled nitric oxide reduced the incidence of lung disease and brain damage in premature infants. More than a decade ago, Drs. Abman and Kinsella were the first ever to use inhaled nitric oxide to treat a preemie with respiratory failure.

Our dedicated work on kids' behalf goes beyond Children's stellar clinical care and research. In support of our advocacy mission, we continue efforts on priority issues, including child abuse prevention, access to quality care and immunizations, and safety and injury prevention awareness, to name a few. Children's is making headway in helping to prevent incidences of Shaken Baby Syndrome by joining forces with The Kempe Center for the Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect and Kohl's to increase awareness and education.

And, we continue to connect with leaders responsible for public policy impacting kids. Prior to the election, we proudly hosted gubernatorial candidates, Bob Beauprez and Bill Ritter, for a candidate forum on children's health.

While we await our long-anticipated move day, the hospital experienced growth beyond brick and mortar. In the spring, Children's and Memorial Health System in Colorado Springs announced a management partnership, providing world-class pediatric services to children in Colorado Springs and surrounding regions of southern Colorado.

This is merely a snapshot of the many accomplishments that would not have occurred without our outstanding physicians, employees and volunteers, collaborating together with our community partners in support of Children's nearly century-old mission.

Children's highly regarded national reputation and impressive contributions to children's healthcare keep the hospital top notch. When you mention The Children's Hospital, you are guaranteed to find someone eager to share a story — often their own personal experience with this remarkable hospital and phenomenal care team. And, behind every great story told stands an extraordinary person or group of people.

In the following pages of our story, you will read about the people who choose to work at Children's. Individually and together, our staff makes a world of difference in a child's life.

These amazing stories are what prompt us to continue advancing healthcare for children. Moving forward, through 2007 and beyond, everything we do will be aligned with five strategies: people, growth, quality, finance and service. Supported by research, communication and advocacy, these strategies will be the context our team follows as we develop relationships with our patients and their families and, of course, with each other.

As always, thank you for your continued support as we prepare to open another historic chapter in The Children's Hospital's evolving story.

Sincerely,

Donald Kortz
Chairman of the Board

COMING UP:

A NEW CHAPTER IN THE CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL'S OWN STORY

ABOVE: Dirt will be tracked in, coffee will spill, bread crumbs will fall and chewing gum will stick, but at the end of the day, the unique artwork on the floor of the Boettcher Atrium always will retain its beauty and entertain the children (and their parents!) who walk on it.

The terrazzo floor is a matrix, consisting of a variety of glass, marble, stone, mother of pearl and plastic chips. A labor of love is the "glue" that holds it all together. The floor is a mesmerizing maze of bright colors, intricate shapes and creative artwork. And the main inspiration for the design? ... Kids.

Building a children's hospital from the ground up is a spectacular opportunity to design a place just for kids and their families.

Our story began back in 2001 when The Children's Hospital Board of Directors made the decision to move Children's main hospital to the Fitzsimons Medical Campus. This opportunity has allowed us to take advantage of a blank canvas and to build according to our own vision, as well as secure a location near our partner, the University of Colorado at Denver and Health Sciences. The new hospital will be the hub of our entire network of care, which includes care centers throughout the Front Range, partnerships with many hospitals, a continued presence in downtown Denver at Exempla Saint Joseph Hospital, a vibrant online presence and continued outreach to rural areas through personal visits and telemedicine.

Throughout every chapter in our story, we've worked with experts in construction, design, lighting, color and art. During each step of the way, we've focused on building a most-healing, family-centered hospital for kids and their families. Staff at The Children's Hospital have been involved in numerous planning committees for input on designing the hospital and, in the past year, have focused on the monumental task of coordinating the logistics required to move to the new hospital.

We look forward to celebrating the opening of our new facility, welcoming families and creating more stories at The new Children's Hospital in October 2007.

LEFT: With the exterior completed in 2006, work shifted to focus on interiors, designed to have an intense focus on how people will experience the space. Light, touch, sound, taste, scent, air, gardens and spirit are all incorporated into an effective and healing space for children and their families.

CENTER: The Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) is "home" to the most delicate babies and is of necessity, softly lit and quiet. At the new hospital, the NICU will include nearly all private rooms as well as a "pinwheel" design, sound-absorbing acoustical ceiling and rubber-backed flooring to absorb and suppress sounds. The tranquil color theme adds to the healing environment with quiet, reflective and calming colors.

RIGHT: Decorative artglass in the Boettcher Atrium stands out on colorful 20' x 30' panels. As you can see in the butterfly panel featured here, hidden images include a variety of musical instruments, animals, athletes and shapes. There are seven decorative panels in the Boettcher Atrium featuring such images as sunflowers, the night sky, running horses and snowflakes.

DEAR FRIENDS,

If you are a parent or have young children in your life, you've probably been asked to "Tell me a story" hundreds of times. So have we. As the theme of the 2006 Annual Report, "Tell me a story" represents the idea that at the heart of The Children's Hospital is more than groundbreaking research and top-notch pediatric medicine. Part of what makes Children's special are the thousands of stories – each one unique – of the children who come through our doors each year. And as representatives of The Children's Hospital Foundation, we know that there is often an equally wonderful story behind each gift that comes to the hospital.

This past year, Children's received nearly 85,000 gifts, which represent tens of thousands of stories of individuals who have been touched by The Children's Hospital. One gift came from 10-year-old Connor Robertson, who has been fighting cancer at The Children's Hospital and collecting donations from friends and family as well. One gift came from Pam and Dutch Bansbach, who made a gift in honor of Dutch's late mother who served on the The Children's Hospital's Board of Directors in the 1960s. Another gift came from Panayes and Riisa Dikeou who made a pledge to support The Children's Hospital Heart Institute in recognition of the care their daughter received there.

In 2006, these 85,000 gifts to The Children's Hospital added up to $45.7 million. This incredible show of community support contributes greatly to the overall success of The Imagine the Miracles Campaign for The Children's Hospital.

As of Dec. 31, 2006, Imagine the Miracles stood at $233 million, 93 percent of the $250 million campaign goal. Of that total, $133 million is helping to build the new hospital and $100 million is funding annual support, people and programs. We are most grateful to the many members of our generous community who are helping us to bring the promise of the world's most healing hospital to fruition as we anxiously await the grand opening of The new Children's Hospital in October 2007.

Some additional fundraising successes of the year include:

- 22 percent growth in gifts of $1,000 to $9,999 and 26 percent growth in gifts of $10,000 to $50,000.
- Online giving doubled in 2006 to $1.2 million, including direct donations, holiday card sales and event registrations.
- Alice's 36 Hours for Kids, the annual Children's Miracle Network radiothon, raised more than $1.1 million.
- Gala 2006 and The 2006 Children's Hospital Courage Classic each raised more than $2 million for the first time in the events' histories.
- Children's Circle of Care reached a record number of members at 311, a 149 percent increase in membership since 2001. This international recognition society honors people who give $10,000 or more in a calendar year.
- Six donors made gifts of more than $1 million, including estate gifts.

The Foundation had another year of extraordinary investment results in 2006, chalking up a 19.3 percent return on the endowment pool, compared to a 15.8 percent return for the S&P 500 and 4 to 5 percent for most fixed income indexes. These results, on top of three previous years of double-digit returns, helped endowed funds grow and distribute more money for critical hospital programs.

We are fortunate to have a strong committee of investment community leaders, with co-chairs Fred Taylor and David Hanson guiding the investment process for Children's. Their expertise, along with solid guidance from our professional investment advisors Monticello Associates, has produced a consistent record of stellar results in good market years while protecting our assets in down markets.

We greatly appreciate all that they do and the impact that these results have for programs in the hospital.

One of the most gratifying aspects of our work with The Children's Hospital Foundation is hearing the compelling and even miraculous stories that inspire gifts to Children's. Our charge at the Foundation lies in recognizing every gift, and in the process, honoring every story.

Thank you to our entire community of donors who have supported The Children's Hospital in 2006. And thank you to everyone who has shared your story with us during the year. We look forward to hearing and telling many more in 2007.

Warm regards,

Steve Winesett

He was a longtime supporter of the hospital, and until his death in 2005 he served as honorary chair of The Imagine the Miracles Campaign for The Children's Hospital. Over the years, the entire Gates family has given generously of both their time and financial resources. TELLING THE STORY

We are storytellers.

Since The Children's Hospital Foundation began in 1978, we have been tasked with telling people stories about amazing things that happen at The Children's Hospital, then asking them to support the cause. We're also listeners, as most of the people who make donations to Children's also have a story to tell us ... of their own time spent at Children's, or of their child or grandchild, or neighbor or colleague.

During The Imagine the Miracles Campaign for The Children's Hospital, we've been telling a story about the difference a new hospital will make for patients, for families, for staff, for children everywhere. Since the campaign began, more than 100,000 donors have helped make this story come to life. Their donations from October 1, 2001 through December 31, 2006 total $233 million. We honor the story of each of these donors.

Donors like the Berlins, who are passionate about the care their son and a cousin received at Children's. The family's unrestricted gifts to the Special Care Clinic and the Bill Daniels Center for Children's Hearing will help ensure that every child who needs the specialty care these programs provide can get it.

Donors like the Tri Deltas, who began raising money for Children's Center for Cancer and Blood Disorders in 1972 when a sorority sister's child received treatment there. The Tri Deltas have established an endowment of more than $1 million, part of which has funded the Center's only bilingual social worker, helping Children's growing Spanish-speaking population better understand their children's cancer care.

And donors like the Halvorsen family, whose daughter had heart surgery at Children's when she was three weeks old. The family has been so impressed by the level of skill, education and caring at The Children's Hospital Heart Institute, they wanted their gift to help fund a workstation in the cardiac intensive care unit. This will ensure caregivers have a great place to work.

Every aspect of The new Children's Hospital is being made possible because donors want to be part of the new chapter of The Children's Hospital's story that begins at Fitzsimons. They want to know that patients will no longer need to share rooms, and that nurses will be able to provide world-class care and service because of their gifts. They want to know that the new hospital will house state-of-the-art technology because of their gifts. They want to know that miracles will happen inside the 1.5 million-square-foot of healing space ... because of their gifts. We can only imagine what stories we will tell our supporters in coming years about what their gifts in the early 2000s made possible. Or what stories our donors will tell us about their experiences at The Children's Hospital. But we know they will be sweet, and our hearts will be filled with joy and gratitude as we tell them.

... we've been telling a story about the difference a new hospital will make for patients, for families, for staff, for children everywhere.

THANK YOU TO OUR DONORS

Lifetime Benefactors

With gratitude, we honor the incredible generosity of these donors who have given $250,000 or more to The Children's Hospital over the years.

Former President and CEO, Dori Biester, PhD, RN, moves Balloon Boy up the mountain. As of Dec. 31, 2006, generous members of the community had given $233 million towards the $250 million goal of The Imagine the Miracles campaign. All funds raised through the end of 2006, which came in under Dori's leadership as president and CEO, will help pay for construction of The new Children's Hospital and support the people and programs within it.

Virginia Reiman, chair of Gala 2006, What the Future Holds, takes a moment with Kelly Kennedy, who is chairing the event in 2007. The 2006 event raised more money than ever before, bringing in $2.3 million for The Children's Hospital.

Sam Taylor and his wife Jennifer hand a check for $5,000 to Roxie Foster PhD, RN, The Children's Hospital Chair in Pediatric Nursing. The Taylors own Sam Taylor's BBQ in Glendale. Their gift established the Taylor Fund, which will provide minority high school students with the necessary resources to examine and pursue health-care professions.

JOINING THE CONVERSATION

We are stewards.

What does it mean to be a steward? In the case of everyone at The Children's Hospital Foundation, it means that we are caretakers of the precious resources the community invests in The Children's Hospital. Our job is to make sure that contributions are spent as the donor intends them and with the greatest possible impact. It also means that we communicate with donors to thank them for their generosity and to share meaningful information about the hospital and the programs in which they are interested.

During the course of The Imagine the Miracles Campaign for The Children's Hospital, the Foundation has made an effort to enhance our stewardship program across all gift levels. Children's Circles of Hope, Courage and Promise recognize donors of $1,000 up to $9,999. Donors in these circles are listed in our annual report, included in select events hosted by the Foundation and invited to visit the hospital. Donors of $10,000 or more are recognized in Children's Circle of Care. In addition to receiving the same benefits as the donors above, Children's Circle of Care members are invited to the North American Leadership Conference, a gathering of like-minded philanthropists and advocates of children's health from across North America. They are also invited to special events created just for them. This year, Children's Circle of Care members gathered at the new Tattered Cover on East Colfax to hear a special reading of "The Giant King" by the author herself.

We are pleased to announce that corporate and foundation donors now have their own recognition societies: Circle of Leadership for donors of $10,000 - $49,999 and Circle of Champions for donors of $50,000 and above. Both groups are recognized through a variety of media, including our Web site, program listings at events and more.

The Tammen Society honors individuals who have notified The Children's Hospital Foundation that they are making a deferred gift to the hospital. Donors in this society receive periodic updates on the hospital, are invited to an annual luncheon and are recognized in the annual report and on the Tammen Society donor wall.

One of the newest recognition societies is the Charles C. Gates Society, established in 2006. The Gates Society recognizes extraordinary donors of $1 million or more over a lifetime. Gates Society members receive invitations to special meetings with hospital and medical leadership and customized communication about The Children's Hospital planning and progress.

The Children's Hospital Foundation also makes a special effort to communicate with donors who have established endowed funds and chairs. These individuals receive a customized report annually that details progress the hospital has made as a result of their gift as well as a report on the financial activity of the endowed funds. The Foundation hosts events for endowed chair donors and chairholders to provide time for conversation about topics of interest to them both.

At The Children's Hospital Foundation, we view stewardship not just as a single event or letter. Rather, our stewardship program attempts to forge ongoing relationships. Stewardship becomes, in effect, a conversation between donors and the institution. The actual gift a donor makes is of course important, but it is just one aspect of this dialogue. Since the onset of Imagine the Miracles, thousands of new donors have joined in conversation with The Children's Hospital – for this we are most grateful. We look forward to many more years of ongoing discussion, and hope that all donors find the conversation meaningful and worthwhile.

ANNUAL DONORS

The Children's Hospital relies upon the generosity of its annual donors — those who support the hospital year after year. We thank the following individuals, corporations and foundations whose gifts have helped the hospital meet its greatest needs during 2006.

The 2006 Children's Hospital Ambassadors greeted the guests of Gala 2006 and were the real stars of the show. The Ambassador Program gives patients and former patients the opportunity to represent The Children's Hospital at premier events around the metro area. Guests at the Gala were shown a moving video featuring the 2006 Ambassadors telling their stories in their own words.

Anni Cusak, daughter Meaghan Cusak and Chris Spurl mug at the start of The 2006 Children's Hospital Courage Classic. Anni formed Meaghan's Mod Squad, a Courage Classic team, after Meaghan was treated for cancer at The Children's Hospital. Meaghan rides all 157 miles on the back of a tandem bicycle. The three-day bike tour broke fundraising records last year when it brought in $2 million for the first time ever.

CHILDREN'S MIRACLE NETWORK

In 2007, Children's Miracle Network celebrates its 25th anniversary as a leading, international non-profit organization dedicated to saving and improving the lives of children by raising funds and awareness for children's hospitals across North America. All of the funds raised by Children's Miracle Network in the Rocky Mountain region of Colorado, Wyoming and western Nebraska benefit The Children's Hospital. Each year, a dedicated alliance of corporate sponsors and community members raise funds for Children's Miracle Network through the sale of paper "Miracle Balloon" icons, events such as Alice's 36 Hours for Kids radiothon and golf tournaments. The generous support of our sponsors in 2006 enabled The Children's Hospital to continue providing the finest medical care and life-saving research to help kids in the Rocky Mountain region and beyond. Thank you to the 2006 Children's Miracle Network supporters.

RADIOTHON

For the sixth straight year, Alice105.9 broke away from their traditional programming to make a difference in the community during Alice's 36 Hours for Kids radiothon, Feb. 22 to 24, 2006. More than 700 dedicated volunteers, hospital staff and Alice's generous listeners made the 2006 event a monumental success, raising more than $1.1 million. We are profoundly grateful for Alice's partnership and especially for the patient families and Children's staff that bring this event to life. A special thanks to the Children's Miracle Network sponsors: Alice 105.9, Marriott Hotels and Foresters.
