Late Breaker: The daily number of COVID-19 cases, hospitalizations, and deaths continue to decline in Colorado. Although this is great news, we need to remember that the case numbers are still higher than what they were in the spring and summer of last year. Accordingly, we still need to be vigilant about following public health recommendations regarding hand hygiene, universal mask wearing, social distancing, avoiding indoor and crowded gatherings, and limiting travel. Interestingly we have yet to see any cases of influenza and have had only one case of RSV detected at CHCO. We are watching closely to see if the U.S. will experience a similar out of season surge of RSV that has been reported in Australia (Foley DA, et al. Clinical Infectious Disease, Feb 17, 2021).
