Late Breaker: The number of children testing positive for influenza A continues to steadily increase and now far surpasses those of SARS-COV-2. Although the overall burden of influenza disease remains low, this trend of rising influenza cases is being reported nationally by the CDC. There is rising concern that we may experience a late winter/early spring influenza surge. This is a continued reminder that respiratory season is still here and it is not too late to get your flu vaccine.