Late Breaker: Many experts are concerned about the possibility of a “tripledemic” this year. Like we are seeing here in Colorado, cases of RSV are rising steadily around the country. Unfortunately, many parts of the U.S are also starting to see a rise in their cases of influenza and are already experiencing medium to high levels of circulation, particularly in some Southern states. Influenza circulation in Colorado remains low, but we have had several positive cases over the past two weeks. SARS-CoV-2 is also likely to make a resurgence sometime in late fall or early winter.
