Late Breaker: Although widespread circulation of influenza and RSV continue, the good news is that we have passed the peak of respiratory season. Globally, there are rising concerns regarding COVID-19 as there are now several countries (South Korea, Japan, Italy, Iran, and Hong Kong) reporting sustained human to human transmission of SARS-CoV-2 and the CDC has issued traveled advisories for these countries. Although there are only 57 cases reported in the US (and none in Colorado) and no sustained human to human transmissible, public health authorities are recommending communities prepare for the likelihood of local transmission in the US. Look for our updated contagious comments for more information regarding CHCO’s preparations and recommendations.
